

Sample Payload: Live Game Score Event Examples

The purpose of this page is to provide examples of data captured for Cricket in the live game score event. See Cricket live game webhooks - Sample payloads for a complete list of Cricket e-scoring events.

 Please note that the example payloads below and on other pages in this directory are not sequential. They are to be used as isolated examples, only.

Simple ball-by-ball event examples

The following examples show how the live game score event payload presents for a number of different simple events that can occur when a ball is bowled to a batter. This list is not exhaustive but covers some of the most common events.

▼ Dot ball

When dot balls are recorded, a live game score event payload will look similar to the following. Note that dot balls are counted as a ball faced, are counted as zero runs, and are not rebowled:

Wide

When wides are recorded, a live game score event payload will look similar to the following. Note that wide events are not counted as a ball faced, and are rebowled. Wides come from the value of the wide itself plus any runs made by the batters when a wide is bowled:

Complex ball-by-ball event examples

The following examples show how the live game score event payload presents for a number of different complex events that can occur when a ball is bowled to a batter. This list is not exhaustive but covers some of the most common events.

Dismissal with extras

Run out with leg byes

In this example, a legal ball was bowled, it hit the on-strike batter's leg, one run was made then a batter was run out. Leg byes are not attributed to the bowler or batter.

Extras with extras

✓ No ball with byes

In this example, a no-ball was bowled, the ball hit the on-strike batter's body then the batters ran one run. Because the batter did not hit the ball, the made run is not attributed to the batter. Only the no-ball is attributed to the bowler.
